2: Street Art, Shopping, and Street Food at Brick Lane Market (Weekends only) (Activity)

Address: 91 Brick Ln, London E1 6QR, United Kingdom

About: The Brick Lane Market is actually a collection of markets that gather on Brick Lane Saturdays and Sundays. There you'll find street stalls overflowing with antiques, clothes and bric-a-brac at bargain prices. Now an artistic hub and the heart of London's Bangladeshi community, Brick Lane was once associated with poor slums and the setting of Jack the Ripper's murders. You'll know find the vibrant area full of galleries, ethnic restaurants, and markets. TopSpots from TimeOutLondon: Twentysevenpalms.com is a lovely, colorful stall in the UpMarket section of Brick Lane, selling cushions made from bright printed fabric. The carpet stall (actually more of a wall than a stall) sells carpets and rugs very cheap. It is located just off Brick Lane on Bacon Street. In the main part of Brick Lane, near the corner of Cheshire Street, there is an occasional stall selling wonderful old luggage and trunks. Also, Hunky Dory Vintage is a shop at 226 Brick Lane that is the best place to buy clothes and handbags. Tip: If you're in need of a pick-me-up or a respite, combine your Brick Lane experience with a trip to Franze and Evans on Redchurch Street, an Italian café with the best coffee in town, and then drink it in the beautiful surroundings of nearby Arnold Circus.

Address: Leicester Square, London WC2H 7NG, UK

About: A pedestrian-only plaza in the heart of west London's theater district, Leicester Square is teeming with restaurants, shops, playhouses, and cinemas – so many cinemas, in fact, that this is where most of London's big movie premieres happen. A-listers like Tom Cruise, Bruce Willis, Sylvester Stallone, and Sir Ian McKellen have all left their handprints in bronze here. The half-price ticket booth next to the John Hunter gate is a great place to score theater tickets.

10: Stylish Chinese Restaurant, The Duck and Rice (Restaurant)

Reservation: Reservation on Mon 7/03/17 at 6:30 PM for 4

Address: 90 Berwick St, Soho, London W1F 0QB, UK

About: Located in London's Chinatown, the Duck and Rice is a stylish two-story bar and restaurant known for great music, craft beer served from copper beer tanks, and an upstairs dining room that highlights progressive Chinese cuisine. While you can enjoy bar snacks like lip-numbing Sichuan chicken at the bar, the full-service upstairs kitchen turns out excellent dishes like Cantonese roast duck with crispy skin, wasabi prawns, and eggplant with preserved mustard greens.
