2: Grab a bite with a view at The Garden Lounge (Restaurant)

Address: Japan, 〒102-8578 Tōkyō-to, Chiyoda-ku, Kioichō, 4-1, ホテルニューオータニ ガーデンタワー ロビー階

About: Situated inside the New Otani Hotel, Garden Lounge (Gadenraunji) serves up a splurge-worthy buffet and unique a la carte items — accompanied by views of the hotel's beautiful gardens. The open lounge is colorful and quirky with large floor-to-ceiling windows that force your gaze towards the serene surroundings. Expect a mix of sweet and savory pastries from the restaurant's expert chef-pâtissier plus seasoned rice, tea sandwiches, soup, fresh fruit, and more.

3: Classic egg waffles at Taiyaki Wakaba (Cafe)

Address: Japan, 〒160-0011 Tōkyō-to, Shinjuku-ku, 新宿区Wakaba, 1 Chome-1 0

About: On a typical weekday morning, expect to see about 15 people lined up outside of Taiyaki Wakaba, a tiny hole-in-the-wall establishment. It's famous for fresh taiyaki, a traditional fish-shaped Japanese cake with a waffle-like consistency and stuffed with sweet red bean paste. For only 140 yen, taiyaki is as cheap as it is delicious. There's a few tables inside (plus free green tea!), or you can take your taiyaki to-go.

4: Visit Shinjuku Gyoen National Garden (Closes at 4:30PM) (Activity)

Address: 11 Naitomachi, Shinjuku, Tokyo 160-0014, Japan

About: Shinjuku Gyoen National Garden is arguably Tokyo's most beautiful park. While here, ask for a map in English ("Eh-go mappoo?") as you walk in so you can be sure to hit all the major gardens: English Landscape, French Formal, Japanese Traditional (with teahouse) and the curiously named Mother and Child Forest (Haha to Ko no Mori). There's also a lovely Taiwan Pavilion; go inside and look out the second-story windows for an excellent view of the park. Entrance is 200 yen.

5: Drinks at GasLight (Night Time)

Address: 四谷2丁目13-3 新宿区 160-0004

About: A moody, romantic, wood-paneled bar modeled after Prohibition-era speakeasies in Chicago, Gaslight is home to champion bartenders who mix perfect martinis, gin and tonics, Moscow Mules, and other classic using house-made spirits including ginger vodka. If the delicious drinks perk up your appetite, they also serve creative small plates like house-made bacon, house-pickled koji miso cream cheese (which goes great with their premium whiskeys, and cheese and sausage platters.

6: Dine at the Casual Takazawa Bar (Restaurant)

Address: 3 Chome-6-10 Akasaka, Minato, Tokyo 107-0052, Japan

About: Aronia de Takazawa is one of Tokyo's best fine dining restaurants, and one of the hardest tables in town to snag. They're so exclusive that they even kicked out the Michelin inspectors. Luckily, Chef Yoshiaki Takazawa has just opened a bar right around the corner from the parent restaurant. "The food menu reflects Takazawa's unwavering focus on premium Japanese ingredients, as always straddling the divide between Japanese and Western. His superb ankimo (monkfish liver) comes from Sado Island, off the coast of Niigata Prefecture. He offers a delectable pate de campagne (country terrine) sandwiched between two wafer-thin, crisp slices of bread made with jet-black bamboo charcoal. Those who have eaten at the restaurant can revisit his classic vegetable parfait in scaled-down form. His karaage fried chicken is excellent, as is his venison sandwich. And the takoyaki dumplings — made with shirako (cod milt) in place of octopus — are not to be missed."

7: Drinks at Trader Vic's (Night Time)

Address: Japan, 〒102-0094 Tōkyō-to, Chiyoda-ku, Kioichō, 4-1 ホテルニューオータニ ガーデンタワー 4F

About: Originally founded in San Francisco, Trader Vic's is a sophisticated steakhouse on the fourth floor of the New Otani Hotel. Decked out in bamboo, carpeted floors, and crisp white tablecloths, the restaurant has equal influences from both Japan and its stateside counterpart. They serve up classic-meets-fusion dishes that will satisfy and fill you to the brim, like marinated t-bone steak with heavy notes of soy sauce and ginger — prepared in an old school Chinese-wood fired oven located in the center of the main dining room. Note: Trader Vic's enforces a 'smart casual' dress code.

Day 2, Thursday September 22, 2016

1: Sushi (with little to no wait) at Sushi Zanmai (Restaurant)

Address: Japan, 〒104-0045 Tōkyō-to, Chūō-ku, Tsukiji, 4 Chome-11 すしざんまい本店

About: Located just around the corner from Tsukiji, Sushi Zanmai is a 24/7 sushi restaurant that serves super fresh fish at great prices. And, because the restaurant is much larger than Sushi Dai or Dawa Sushi inside Tsukiji, the line moves much quicker, meaning you won't need to wait 3 hours at the break of dawn to get a spot here.

2: Explore Tsukiji Market (Activity)

Address: 5 Chome-2-1 Tsukiji, Chuo, Tokyo 104-0045, Japan 104-0054

About: Take a morning stroll through Tsukiji to see the endless variety of seafood that comes through Tokyo each day. While the market opens to the public only after 8AM, you can join a private tour for early access. For access to the tuna auction, you will either need to arrive very early at 2AM and wait, or join a VIP tour option to gain entry at 4:30AM without the wait. Note: The market isn't designed as a tourist destination so watch out for the mini-forklifts zipping around. If you want to get up super early, you can register to see the tuna auction (registration starts promptly at 5AM), and takes place here.

3: Coffee at Tsukiji Market Turret Cafe (ターレット コーヒー) (Cafe)

Address: Japan, 〒104-0045 Tokyo, Chuo, Tsukiji, 2 Chome-12-6, SK 東銀座ビル

About: Located on a narrow side street on the outskirts of the Tsukiji market, Turret is a pint-sized café where owner Kiyoshi Kawasaki serves top-notch espresso in ochoko sake cups. With just five counter seats and two small tables, it's a bare-bones space with little room to linger, but Kawasaki pours what just might be the best latte in Tokyo. There are also non-coffee drinks if you are abstaining from caffeine.

4: Uni Over Rice at Uni Tora Kurau (うに虎喰) (Restaurant)

Address: 築地4丁目10-14 中央区 104-0045

About: If you're an uni lover like we are, this may just be the sexiest spot in all of Tokyo. Located near Tsukiji, Uni Tora Kurau specializes in uni rice bowls. Get a completely obscene amount of uni over a bed of sushi rice. Here, they have uni from all of the world, but you're here for the Japanese stuff. Try the 3 Japanese uni-don, which comes with 3 types of Japanese uni for ¥5,000 - one meant to be eaten sans soy sauce, a second with shiso and salt, and a third with an egg yolk broken over it.

(Restaurant)

Address: Tokyo Station Ichibangai B1, Tokyo Ramen Street, 1-9-1 Marunouchi, Chiyoda, Tokyo 100-0005, Japan

About: This famous tsukemen shop—where the noodles are served “naked” with the broth on the side—was one of the first shops to bring fish flavors to the forefront. While Rokurinsha serves mainly pork-based tonkotsu broths, they use a number of different dried fish, including mountains of katsuobushi, niboshi (dried baby sardines), and sababushi (dried mackerel flakes). There's typically a long line during lunch hours, so we recommend heading there post-lunch rush.

16: Cocktails at Code Name Mixology Akasaka (Night Time)

Address: Japan, 〒107-0052 Tokyo, Minato 赤坂3丁目1-4-3 渡林赤坂ビル2F

About: Japan Times food critic Melinda Joe referred to Code Name Mixology bartender Shuzo Nagumo as “the Willy Wonka of extraordinary cocktails” – and with good reason: Nowhere else in the world can you taste the likes of his blue cheese or smoked chocolate martinis, and his house-infused foie gras vodka. They do have a menu, but the best thing to do is tell the bartender what flavors you like and have him or her mix up a custom cocktail. The second-floor location in Akasaka can be challenging to find, but the lighting is romantic and the dark wood welcoming.

2: Explore Daikanyama, Tokyo's Charming Brooklyn-esque Neighborhood (Activity)

Address: Daikanyamacho, Shibuya, Tokyo 150-0034, Japan

About: Located on the western edge of Shibuya, Daikanyama is a trendy popular neighborhood with maze-like streets filled with unique boutiques, open-air cafes, and more. It's a residential area that's slower-paced and quieter than the neighboring Shibuya, which also means there are fewer tourists and more locals. Spend an afternoon wandering the streets here and find a cafe to sit and people watch.

5: Browse the Selection at Tsutaya Books (Shopping)

Address: Japan, 〒150-0033 東京都渋谷区 猿樂町17-5

About: Walk from Shibuya down to Daikanyama - a trendy neighborhood area and stop by Daikanyama T-site and Tsutaya Books. "This isn't your typical bookstore. There's lots of architectural elements of wood, glass, and angles that make it incredibly photogenic. The store itself is set up so there's 3 buildings with glass hallways that connect them. The second floor is a cafe and bar and it's hard to describe because we don't really have an equivalent to this in New York. The Library at the Nomad perhaps comes the closest. In the middle of the afternoon at this bookstore, I sat in a big comfy leather sofa and had 3 martinis and espressos." - Chris Jaeckle, Chef + Owner of All'Onda NYC for Journy

Address: Japan, 〒150-0043 Tōkyō-to, Shibuya-ku, Dōgenzaka, 2 Chome-29-1, SHIBUYA 109

About: Shibuya 109 has been the fashion mecca in Tokyo for the last 30 years and a destination for teens in search of the latest trends. Take a walk-through to check out the crazy Japanese fashions and accessories. If you're here to buy clothes or shoes though, keep in mind that sizing is extremely limited (shoes, for instance, come in just XS, S, M, L sizes - an M is about a 6.5-7 US, L is about a 7.5-8). 10: Explore Yoyogi Park (Activity)

Address: 2-1 Yoyogikamizonocho, Shibuya, Tokyo 151-0052, Japan 渋谷区 151-0063

About: On Sundays, visiting Harajuku is a must - it's the day of the week when different sub-cultures come here and express themselves through all kinds of interesting dress (Lolita goth punk is a popular theme). Just outside the entrance of Yoyogi Park, there's usually a group of Elvis impersonators hanging around and dancing. Definitely a sight to see. But, there's also more to it than that: "Just steps away from Yoyogi station is one eco-conscious musician's idea of an urban oasis. Part eco-park, part shopping arcade, part lifestyle hub, Yoyogi Village is filled with shops, cafes and restaurants, all operated with thoughtful simplicity. Go there for a break from the frenzy that is Tokyo, to be inspired by the next generation of Japanese creatives, but also to get fed really really well. When visiting, have a pastry from pour-kur, the tiny on-site bakery, known for its house-made yeast. With your pastry in hand, explore the complex via the elevated wooden walkways." - Betty Liao's Journy

11: Visit Meiji Shrine (Activity)

Address: 1-1 Yoyogikamizonocho, Shibuya, Tokyo 151-8557, Japan 151-0052

About: Dedicated to the late 19th-century emperor who opened Japan to the West, Tokyo's most famous Shinto shrine is wonderfully serene and austere, not colorful or flashy like other Asian places of worship, and is less of a tourist trap than Senso-ji, the big Buddhist temple across town in Asakusa. The 40-foot-high (12-meter) torii gate at the entrance to the 200-acre park is made of 1,500-year-old cypress, and there's a second one like it closer to the shrine itself. Stop at the cleansing station where you can dip into a communal water tank and purify your hands and mouth before offering up a prayer. You can write wishes on little pieces of paper and tie them onto the prayer wall, or do as the locals do — toss some yen into the offering box (it's near the enormous taiko drum), bow your head twice, clap twice, and bow once more.

12: Explore Harajuku & Shop Along Takeshita Street (Activity)

Address: Japan, 〒150-0001 Tokyo, Shibuya, 神宮前1丁目19-1 1

About: This famous fashion and shopping district is a hotbed of youth culture full of affordable and fun fashion shops. Made (extra) famous by Gwen Stefan's "Harajuku Girls," it's here that you'll see all kinds of alternative fashions, particularly Lolita dresses. Be sure to check out Laforet, ground zero for Lolita fashions. There are many shops on Takeshita Dori and Omotesando. As you walk toward Omotesando, the streets become more modern and the shops more high-end.

14: Yuzu Ramen at Afuri Harajuku (阿夫利) (Restaurant)

Address: 3 Chome-63-1 Sendagaya, Shibuya, Tokyo 151-0051, Japan 港区 106-0032

About: Afuri is known for their light yuzu shio and shoyu ramens. The yuzu-flavored broth is light, and refreshing with a citrus flavor. The cha shu here is also excellent. The style of ramen here is called assari (light, non-fatty) - unlike most ramens you'll find in the US, this is one that you'll feel good eating regularly. Tip: While most of the ramens here are done with a chicken broth base, they also have a vegan ramen option.

15: Drink at Bar Albatross in Golden Gai (Night Time)

Address: Japan, 〒160-0021 Tōkyō-to, Shinjuku-ku, Kabukichō, 1 Chome-1-7, ゴールデン街5番街

About: Shinjuku's Golden Gai Alley and Memory Lane are filled with tiny little bars, many frequented by regulars (some are designated Yakuza bars). Here, it's not rare to find bars with signs outside to keep out foreigners. Due to the intimate nature of the bars, and the fact that conversation with the bartender is a key part of the experience, many spots that stipulate that you must speak Japanese to be allowed a seat. Albatross is one of the best bars that welcomes English speakers. The friendly staff here all speak English and are happy to recommend drinks and engage in conversation. This is also a spot that Anthony Bourdain visited during his night out in Tokyo. Pro tip: There's also a make-shift rooftop seating area that offers a great view of Shinjuku and you can request to be seated there.

16: Robot Show (ロボットレストラン) - Book in Advance (Activity)

Address: Japan, 〒160-0021 Tokyo, Shinjuku, Kabukicho, 1 Chome-7-1, 新宿ロボットビルB2

About: Located in Tokyo's Kabuki-cho red-light district, this is was Anthony Bourdain's first stop on his Parts Unknown Tokyo episode. Bourdain calls this - "The greatest show on earth!" - and that is exactly what it is. The show, the setting, the decor, the concept, the costumes, are all things that could only exist in Japan. To give you an idea of the extravagance here, the restaurant itself cost over $100M USD to build (funded by the Yakuza). In this 1 hour spectacle, you'll see flashing lights, taiko drums, techno music, scantily clad girls, neon tanks, and you guessed it, giant robots. This is more a cabaret than a restaurant (you'll get handed a bento box of food when you arrive, but the food is definitely not the reason to come here). ※Please arrive 15 minutes before the show starts. After the main show commences late entry will not be permitted. Here are the cut-off entry times for each show - 3:45pm for 3:20pm show (Main Show starts at 4:00pm) | 5:40pm for 5:15pm show (Main Show starts at 5:55pm) | 7:35pm for 7:10pm show 8Main Show starts at 7:50pm) | 9:30pm for 9:05pm show (Main Show starts at 9:45pm)

18: Late Night Eating and Drinking in Drunkard's Alley AKA Memory Lane or Yakitori Lane (Omoide Yokocho) (Night Time)

Address: Japan, 〒160-0023 Tokyo, Shinjuku, 西新宿7-13-12

About: "Memory Lane" is a series of tiny bars and eateries crammed between railway tracks in Shinjuku. You'll find over 60 small restaurants and bars here. Most serve yakitori either using gas burners or the traditional coal burner grills. Note that most spots don't have English menus and most owners don't speak English, but you can always point to what you'd like to order. During the winter, you'll find the restaurants serving oden, a soup like broth used to cook a variety of vegetables and fish. Sit amongst the salarymen and pound back a few...or 10. Omoide yokocho is also known as "Piss Alley" due to the drunkenness that can result from a long night spent here.

3: Explore the Wonders of Japanese Food Halls at Isetan Dining (Activity)

Address: 新宿3丁目14-1 新宿区 160-0022

About: One of the must-do things in Tokyo is visiting one of the department store food halls. Any time of day, this is a great option for cheap, delicious, and unique fare. The basement of Isetan Dining is a great place to shop for beautiful pastries and snacks to take home. Recommended as a must visit by Chef Yoshiaki Takazawa of the 3-star Michelin Aronia de Takazawa. "A wonderful shop to visit in Tokyo is the basement food hall at Isetan Department Store. It has lots of interesting suppliers, including Ameya Eitaro, a sweet company that dates back to 1857. It sells beautiful, innovative sweets like "sweet lip" candy, which looks like lip gloss but is edible. The first time I saw it, I was immediately inspired to create something similar in my cooking. Food should be fun." - Chef Takazawa

4: 24 Hour Ramen in Private Stalls at Ichiran (一蘭 渋谷店) (Restaurant)

Address: 1 Chome-22-7 Jinnan, Shibuya, Tokyo, Japan

About: "Ichiran is one of the most famous ramen shops in Tokyo. The most interesting and fun thing about Ichiran is that you don't talk to anybody. You feed money into a vending machine until a series of lights come on giving you options to make your selection. If you insert 1000 yen, 1 light goes on, if you insert another 100 yen, you see an option to add an egg. You even buy your beer through the vending machine. After you've bought your tickets through the vending machine, you walk into an individual cubicle with wooden walls on both sides of you and slide your tickets under a curtain. A minute later, a bowl of noodles comes out underneath the curtain. You eat your bowl of ramen, and then you get out. You can't talk and you can't see anybody. If you only bought one beer and wanted another one, you'd have to leave to get another beer. The ramen here was very good and my favorite part has to be that they give you a pack of MSG to add. It's just fantastic." - Chris Jaeckle, Chef and Owner, All'Onda NYC, former chef at Morimoto Sushi Restaurant NYC

Address: Japan, 〒102-0094 Tōkyō-to, Chiyoda-ku, Kioichō, 4-1, ホテルニューオータニ ザ・メイン ロビー

About: Situated at the far end of the New Otani Hotel lobby, Okahan is a traditional-meets-upscale sukiyaki and shabu shabu restaurant. They serve up Japan's most famous meat-centric dishes, which are prepared with the highest quality beef and served with carefully selected seasonal vegetables plus steamed rice and miso soup. Tableside, the expert chefs cook the sukiyaki dishes with a special blend of soy sauce and sugar while the shabu shabu dishes are boiled in a flavorful dashi. Pro-tip: The multi-course dinner can get pricey, but they also have an excellent (albeit more modest) lunch deal that doesn't break the bank.

8: Expertly prepared drinks at Bar Tiare (Night Time)

Address: Japan, 〒107-0052 Tōkyō-to, Minato-ku, Akasaka, 4 Chome-2-2, 赤坂鳳月堂本店ビル 5F

About: Bar Tiare is an Akasaka Mitsuke bar that serves up expertly prepared cocktails with fresh-as-anything ingredients. Each drink is more beautiful than the last, served in a variety of uniquely shaped long-stemmed, lowball, and tumbler drinking glasses. The bar is dark and cozy to boot, with dark leather chairs and dim lighting that will allow you to easily pass time as you sip, chat, and relax.
